

Cute young marrieds, Barbara Rush and Jeffrey Hunter are getting ready to welcome their first heir due in July. And, unlike most about-to-be pops, Jeff's not counting on a boy!

INEANTICIPATION

"We won't need that for months," laughs Barbara, as Jeff makes like proud father. Two have been considering names for both sexes (maybe Alice or Michael; not definitely decided yet), don't care if baby's a male or a female.

"Baby needs shoes," quips Jeff as he shows Barb miniature pair while shopping in the Nancy de Ruosi Shop in the Beverly Hills Hotel. Barbara feels they're very lucky; she received wonderful gifts at shower and a friend's lending them crib and a perambulator.

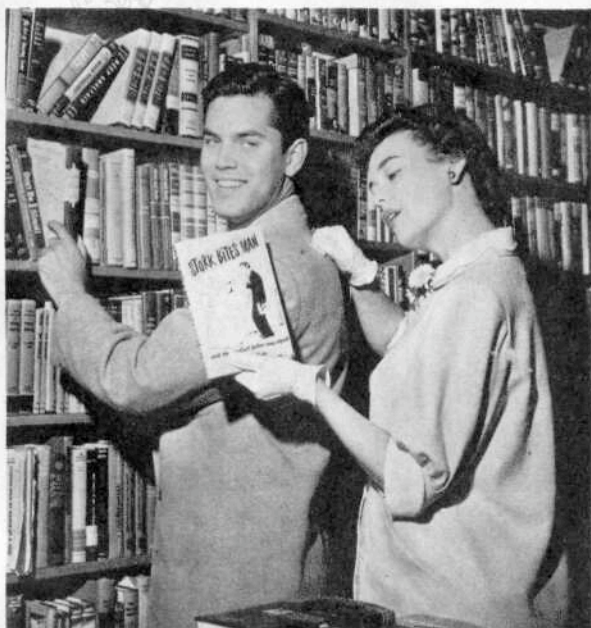

A present for his lovin' wife; twin monkeys she spied in the Confiserie Old Vienna. Along with picking up toys and clothes, Jeff and Barbara are looking for furnishings for expected arrival's room in their Westwood apartment.

In the Anticipation Shop, Barb shops for herself, models "poodle" dress for spouse. Barb and Jeff are great friends of the Dale Robertsons who just became parents, double date often; also the John Dereks. Barb co-stars with John in Prince of Pirates.

Whenever Barbara goes browsing through Martindale's Book Store, she usually winds up with cook book. She's a good cook and loves it. Jeff's the clean-up man, but admits that with their dishwashing machine, the chore's not a bad one!

Before continuing shopping tour, Jeff treats his missus to lunch at the Gourmet Beverly Restaurant. Considered one of best new personalities on 20th lot, Jeff doesn't get much rest between films, has just completed Cry of the Swamp.
